Facts for Farmers.

Facts for Mechanics.—A sensible writer remarks that St. Paul was a mechanic; a tent maker. Our Saviour was a mechanic; a carpenter. The great Architect of the Universe, in the mechanism of the heavens and the earth with all its productions, animate and inanimate, displays a power and skill which human wisdom may attempt to imitate, but which it never can equal or approach.

Next to farmers, mechanics are the most numerous and the most important class of the community. Whatever promotes their interests, of course promotes the interests of the public. They, like farmers, have great facilities and great inducements to become men of science and sound knowledge. Every mechanic, in every operation, brings into use some principle of science; which principle it is, of course, his interest and his convenience to understand.

Every apprentice boy, no matter how assiduous or how rigorous his employment, if he spends a few minutes daily in useful reading and other modes of improvement, is certain to be a man of future influence and respectability. The apprentice who seeks most assiduously the interests of his own employer, promotes most effectively his own interest; as character is the best capital a young man can have for the commencement of business.

Mechanics, like farmers, make safe and enlightened statesmen. They are well educated for legislators, and for authorities, because educated in schools of experience make laws for aiding the operations of business, than those engaged in these operations?

In 1836, a few farmers and mechanics in a small village in Massachusetts organized a society, entitled the "Mutual Branch of the American Lyceum." Its objects the mutual improvement of its members, and the "diffusion of knowledge over the globe." From that humble, but dignified and republican origin, has arisen the general institution of lyceums, now in operation in almost every section of both continents, and in many of the islands of the Atlantic and Pacific.

It is evident that if farmers and mechanics through the country generally should enlist in earnest in the great work of self-education, they might reform and perpetuate our republican institutions, and to posterity. Without that step it is equally evident that though the American Republic may retain its name, republicanism, especially in America, will be known only among the things that were.—Phila. Argus.

Worth Knowing.

I tried a curious experiment with a few potatoes this season. Twelve months since I saw a letter from a farmer, stating the great success that had attended an experiment the writer had made in the previous season. It consisted in inserting a pea in each potato set, and planting the potato in the usual way. The result, he stated, was a large yield of peas, and a splendid crop of potatoes, but the most important result was the entire freedom of the potatoes so treated from any disease, while all those planted in the usual way in the same field were extensively diseased. I was led by this statement to try the experiment on a small scale in my own garden this season. I planted not quite half a peck, only fifty sets, in six ranks, cutting a piece out of each, and putting a pea firmly in. The peas grew up and flourished well, and last week I dug the potatoes. They were perfectly free from all taint or speck of disease, and very fine and large, while in the same bed, close to them, was another lot planted in the old style, nearly half of which were rotten. I leave your readers to draw their own conclusions.—Letter in London Agricultural Gazette.

Hydrophobia.—A man was cured of hydrophobia in Italy lately by swallowing cinchona in mistake for a medical potion. A physician in Padua had of this, and tried the remedy on a patient; he gave him a pint of vinegar in the morning, another at noon, and a third at sunset, which cured him.—Scientific American.

One establishment in New York, with the aid of 500 workmen, turns out daily 4,000 hoop skirts for the ladies.

"Come here, and tell me what the four seasons are?" Young prodigy answers: "Pepper, mustard, salt and vinegar; that's what mother always says."

Surely some people must know themselves—they never think about anything else.
